Works in Progress is a monthly seminar series devoted to discussing minority health and health disparities research topics. The purpose of these seminars is to give researchers a forum to freely discuss their research while still in the developing or formative phases in order to exchange ideas, obtain constructive feedback, and discuss issues that may be common to various projects (e.g., study design issues, recruitment strategies). The goal is to provide an opportunity for researchers with differing backgrounds and expertise but a shared passion for reducing health disparities to sit together and discuss their work.

Works in Progress is sponsored by the University of Minnesota Center for Health Equity (CHE). To present your research project or idea at a future seminar, please contact Amy Shanafelt at 612-626-6796 or park0607@umn.edu

This seminar is supported in part by a grant from the National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (1P60MD003422) to the University of Minnesota Center for Health Equity.

Center for Health Equity
Works in Progress

Tuesday, June 25th, 1:00pm – 2:00pm - lunch provided
717 Delaware, Room 105
RSVP: park0607@umn.edu

"I is for Incarceration - Reaching Children with Incarcerated Parents through Sesame Street."

Presented by: Rebecca Shlafer, PhD
Assistant Professor, Department of Pediatrics

Rebecca Shlafer, PhD, is an Assistant Professor in the Division of General Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine. Dr. Shlafer completed her BS and MS in Human Development and Family Studies at the University of Wisconsin - Madison, and her PhD in Child Psychology at the Institute of Child Development at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Shlafer's research focuses on understanding the developmental outcomes of children and families with multiple risk factors. She is particularly interested in children with parents in prison, as well as the programs and policies that impact families affected by incarceration.

Works in Progress is a monthly seminar series devoted to discussing minority health and health disparities research topics. The purpose of these seminars is to give researchers a forum to freely discuss their research while still in the developing or formative phases in order to exchange ideas, obtain constructive feedback, and discuss issues that may be common to various projects (e.g., study design issues, recruitment strategies). The goal is to provide an opportunity for researchers with differing backgrounds and expertise but a shared passion for reducing health disparities to sit together and discuss their work.

Works in Progress is sponsored by the University of Minnesota Center for Health Equity (CHE). To present your research project or idea at a future seminar, please contact Amy Shanafelt at 612-626-6796 or park0607@umn.edu

This seminar is supported in part by a grant from the National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (1P60MD003422) to the University of Minnesota Center for Health Equity.

Center for Health Equity
Works in Progress

Tuesday, June 25th, 1:00pm – 2:00pm - lunch provided
717 Delaware, Room 105
RSVP: park0607@umn.edu

"I is for Incarceration - Reaching Children with Incarcerated Parents through Sesame Street."

Presented by: Rebecca Shlafer, PhD
Assistant Professor, Department of Pediatrics

Rebecca Shlafer, PhD, is an Assistant Professor in the Division of General Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine. Dr. Shlafer completed her BS and MS in Human Development and Family Studies at the University of Wisconsin - Madison, and her PhD in Child Psychology at the Institute of Child Development at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Shlafer's research focuses on understanding the developmental outcomes of children and families with multiple risk factors. She is particularly interested in children with parents in prison, as well as the programs and policies that impact families affected by incarceration.

Works in Progress is a monthly seminar series devoted to discussing minority health and health disparities research topics. The purpose of these seminars is to give researchers a forum to freely discuss their research while still in the developing or formative phases in order to exchange ideas, obtain constructive feedback, and discuss issues that may be common to various projects (e.g., study design issues, recruitment strategies). The goal is to provide an opportunity for researchers with differing backgrounds and expertise but a shared passion for reducing health disparities to sit together and discuss their work.

Works in Progress is sponsored by the University of Minnesota Center for Health Equity (CHE). To present your research project or idea at a future seminar, please contact Amy Shanafelt at 612-626-6796 or park0607@umn.edu

This seminar is supported in part by a grant from the National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (1P60MD003422) to the University of Minnesota Center for Health Equity.

Center for Health Equity
Works in Progress

Tuesday, June 25th, 1:00pm – 2:00pm - lunch provided
717 Delaware, Room 105
RSVP: park0607@umn.edu

"I is for Incarceration - Reaching Children with Incarcerated Parents through Sesame Street."

Presented by: Rebecca Shlafer, PhD
Assistant Professor, Department of Pediatrics

Rebecca Shlafer, PhD, is an Assistant Professor in the Division of General Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine. Dr. Shlafer completed her BS and MS in Human Development and Family Studies at the University of Wisconsin - Madison, and her PhD in Child Psychology at the Institute of Child Development at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Shlafer's research focuses on understanding the developmental outcomes of children and families with multiple risk factors. She is particularly interested in children with parents in prison, as well as the programs and policies that impact families affected by incarceration.