“Nondaily Smoking among African Americans and Whites”

Presented by:

Taneisha Buchanan, PhD

Taneisha Buchanan, PhD is a post-doctoral associate in the Center for Health Equity at the University of Minnesota under the mentorship of Dr. Jasjit Ahluwalia. She obtained her doctorate in Counseling Psychology from The University of Akron. Her areas of research interest include ethnic minority health and health disparities, particularly tobacco-related disease prevention. The focus of her postdoctoral research is on nondaily smoking, an understudied but increasing trend among current smokers in the United States.

Works in Progress is a monthly seminar series devoted to discussing minority health and health disparities research topics. The purpose of these seminars is to give researchers a forum to freely discuss their research while still in the developing or formative phases in order to exchange ideas, obtain constructive feedback, and discuss issues that may be common to various projects (e.g., study design issues, recruitment strategies). The goal is to provide an opportunity for researchers with differing backgrounds and expertise but a shared passion for reducing health disparities to sit together and discuss their work.

Works in Progress is sponsored by the University of Minnesota Center for Health Equity (CHE). To present your research project or idea at a future seminar, please contact Elaine Elliott at 612-626-4120 or eelliott@umn.edu.

This seminar is supported in part by a grant from the National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (1P60MD003422) to the University of Minnesota Center for Health Equity.
